We are a community owned and operated content management system. and the SEER registry data, two groups of patients were identified. One, characterized as PTC patients with a large tumor volume, includes patients with a tumor volume greater than a certain threshold, which was set at 1500 mm^3 . They also have a significantly higher DFS survival rate than the patients in the other group. This result is in line with the histopathological findings in that metastatic PTC cells were more commonly observed in massive tumors than in smaller tumors. Based on these findings, this study indicated that large tumor volume is a significant prognostic marker to predict lower tumor recurrence. TNM staging is a widely used method for classifying cancer and for evaluating the prognosis of patients \[[@R23]\]. However, several studies have reported that the staging system of PTC is inaccurate in predicting the outcome of patients after surgery \[[@R24]\]. The AJCC TNM staging system measures the tumor size and e79caf774b
